Stage II Storyboard

What advanced elements make this site unique and/or more complete than your Stage I site?
For Stage II I will be using flash to show a small slideshow of images when people first look enter the website, I will also provide a gallery where they can click on each picture to see a larger view. The buttons will switch to a different image when clicked on to provide a visual effect.

What research is needed to provide accurate, fact-based content of the topic feature in the Stage II site?
I will research different photography tips and websites that I can include in the website. I will provide links to these different websites for additional help to those looking at my website. I will select a website for each information page so the link to the website will focus on the area they are looking at.

How will complex or in-depth information be organized for the Stage II site?
Each page will offer links to all pages on the website for easy navigation throughout the site. All pages on the website will have links that can be clicked on for additional information. All pages will be organized with information from me and additional information from outside sources. All pages will also have a link to e-mail me, the creator of the website for any questions, comments or further information.

How does writing for the Web differ from traditional print materials?
When writing for the web you have to consider that people are looking for quick information so paragraphs should be short and to the point instead of long and drawn out. Lists are also helpful as they are a quick way to get information across.

How would you promote the Stage II site worldwide?
I will create metafile words that can be found in search engines with the correct spelling and common misspellings such as photography, photo, phtography, photo tips.
