Storyboard II

What advanced elements make this site unique and/or more complete than your Stage I site?

My Stage II Site will be a lot more detailed than my Stage I site. I plan to add some sort of animation to the first page to make the site more appealing and the Photos page will contain links to see more photos under the different categories. I plan on changing my background colors and making the site easier on the viewer’s eye. I would like to make the site something that is opened and the viewer receives a little more specific information every time a link is clicked.

What research (provide five specific examples) is needed to provide accurate, fact-based content for the topic featured in the Stage II site?

I will research tips on how to use Photoshop, what digital cameras are the best, how to take a good picture, what is best to take pictures of and jobs in photography. After adding this to my profile, hopefully the viewer will be inspired to take an interest in photography as well.

How will complex or in-depth information be organized for the Stage II site?

In depth information will be organized by lists and external links providing more information to what is being shown. For example, in my “About Me” section, I would like to put a link to show where Lubbock, TX is and where exactly I am from. The other in depth information will be easy to get to and the site will be easy for all to view.

How does writing for the Web differ from traditional print materials?

The obvious difference between the two is the code used for the Web. Other differences include the length of what is written and how it is written. Traditional print materials are quite a bit longer than those written for the web. Any reader will become bored if something is too wordy, whether it be traditional print or the Web, but on the Web there are distractions and other sites to look at that can be accessed quickly, therefore it is better to have text on the website that is easy to read and understand.

How would you promote the Stage II site worldwide?

I have learned in this class to type in words used by search engines commonly so that my site will show up often during a viewer’s search for photography. I have misspelled several of the words, just in case they make an error.
